

Encouraging Successful Communicators

Lead students to become creators by teaching them to apply grammar skills to written communication. Students will learn how to analyze sample texts to see how grammar and punctuation rules affect communication. Grammar chapters alternate with writing chapters that teach several genres of writing, including narrative, informative, and argumentative. Ultimately, students will be learning how to craft and create effective writing, while exploring biblical worldview themes of communication.

How We Teach It

Writing Process

The student worktext and teacher edition emphasize the five steps of the writing process in writing units and workshops.

Mentor Texts

Teachers can introduce mentor texts so students can analyze grammar functions and apply them to improve their own writing.

Grammar Application

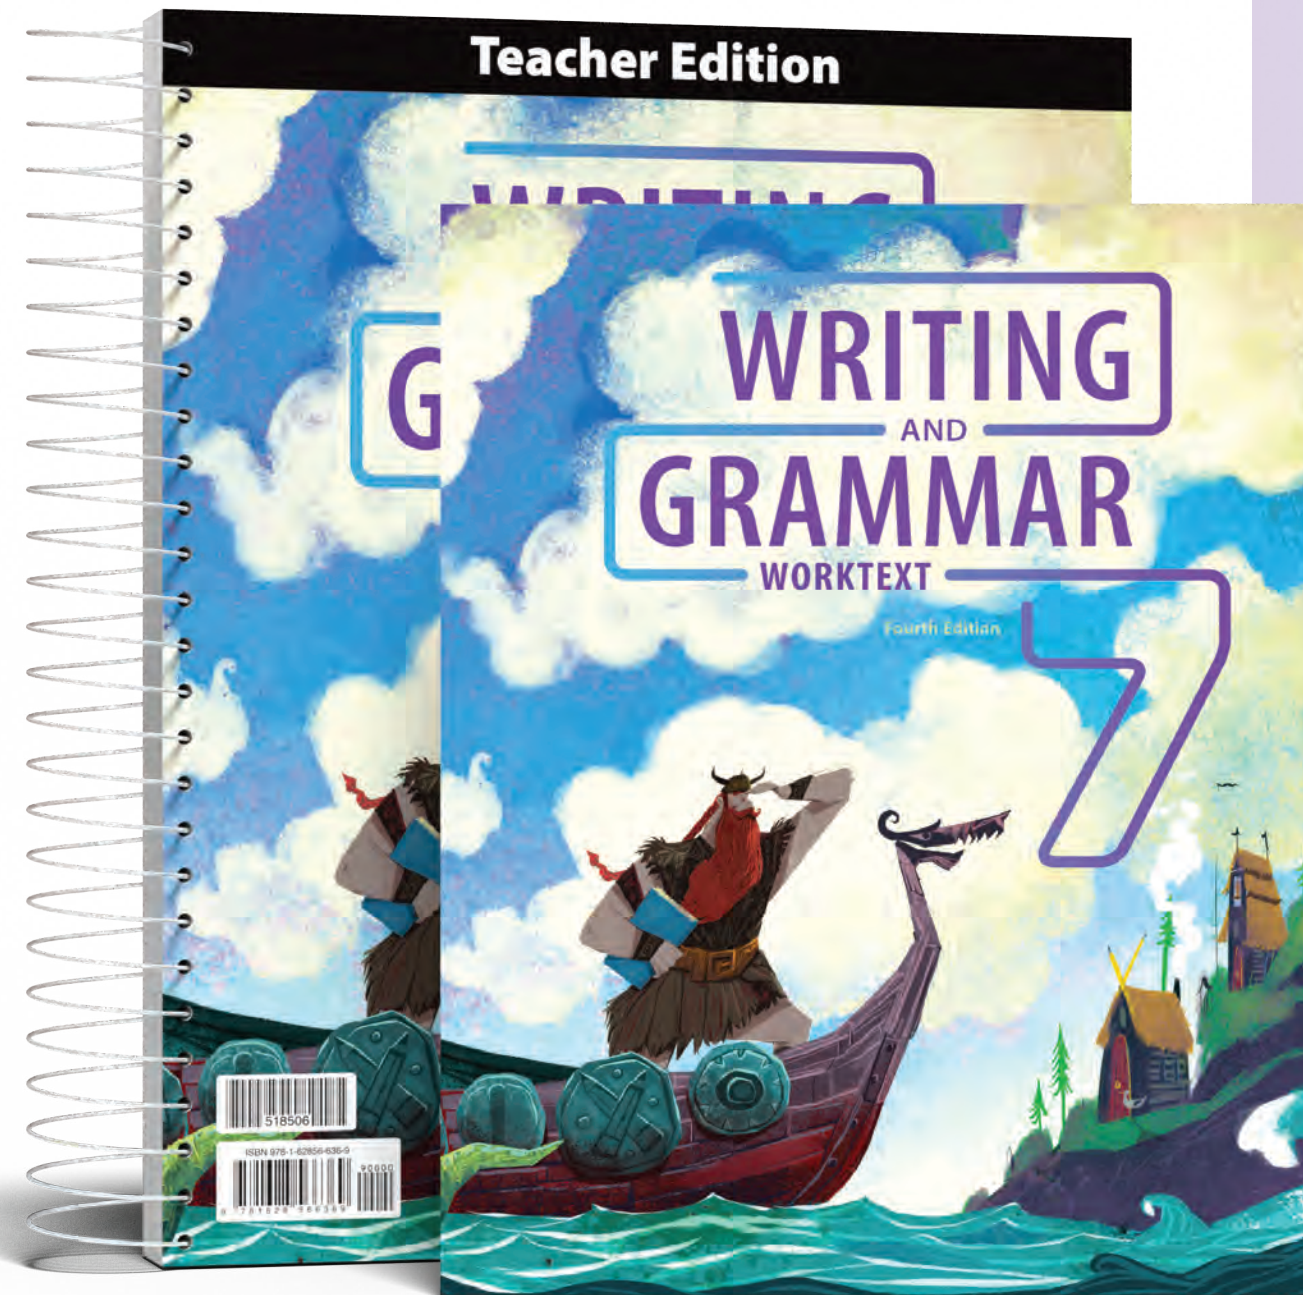

Writing Workshops and grammar mini-lessons give students opportunities to directly apply grammar concepts to their writing.

Worldview Reflection

Reflection activities encourage students to apply biblical worldview shaping themes to their writing and to how they think about communication.

Art and Illustrations

Colorful, creative art and illustrations engage students with each lesson.

Teacher Edition

The teacher edition includes a variety of resources for engaging students and differentiating instruction. It will include suggestions for game ideas, rubrics and instructional aids, teaching notes and guides, and biblical worldview shaping notes that highlight truth, beauty, virtue, and balance.

Student Worktext

In the student worktext, students will learn to analyze sentences grammatically and use those skills to communicate effectively. Writing Workshops and Writer's Tips help students to apply skills to their writing to be better communicators.

Assessments and assessments answer keys are also available.
